register mark/copyright:

The use of The Melting Pot logo since 1975 has resulted in a considerable amount of equity build-up for the restaurant's identity, as public awareness has grown with each passing year. The logo is The Melting Pot's most valuable asset and should be well protected.

Logo standards are developed as a guide for those developing artwork on behalf of our organization. While you may not directly participate in the actual building of creative files, it is your responsibility to ensure the standards are maintained.

The Melting Pot logo is composed of a symbol (the graphic symbol used to identify the company) and logotype (the company name designed in a special lettering style). The Registration mark ® is required on the logo. Any attempt to use it without registration could have serious legal consequences.

Legal Registration is not required to protect ownership. However, registration establishes an official record of the mark and offers additional legal rights. It is also an excellent notification that the company's mark should not be considered a generic term to be used by others at will.

The Melting Pot logo is a vectorized image (computerized vector-based hand drawn) and should not be reproduced under any circumstances.

positive & reverse logos on backgrounds:

positive & reverse logos:

The Melting Pot logos shown here are POSITIVE, for use on light background of 50 percent value or lighter; and REVERSE, for use on dark backgrounds of 50 percent value or darker.

Positive logos should be used on light backgrounds with values equal to 0 percent to 50 percent of black (white to medium grey).

Reverse logos should be used on dark backgrounds with values equal to 50 percent to 100 percent of black (medium grey to solid black).

Keep in mind that backgrounds include all material upon which the logo is applied, such as colored papers, painted surfaces, plastics, fabrics or even tinted glass.
